WEEDY PASTURES HAZARD TO STOCK

Weedy pastures are dangerous to livestock, says A. B. Massey, botanist at VPI.

He warns that such weeds as lambs quarter, pigweed, white cockle, burdock, smartweed, bonset, and others may contain high amounts of nitrate. If eaten by an animal in foal, they may bring on abortion. If the pasture becomes weedy, mow it. Practice weed control, Promote top pasture by fertilization and good management. Do not let animals eat themselves "out of house and home" by close grazing which weakens the sod and encourages the growth of weeds.

PREPARATION OF TOBACCO IMPORTANT FOR GROWERS OF FLUE-CURED LEAF

Revised U. S. standard grades for flue-cured tobacco make it more important than ever this year for growers to do a careful job of sorting the crop on the farm, believes G. R. Mathews, tobacco specialist at VPI.

Under the revisions, tobaccos with undesirable characteristics will be segregated, and the tolerance of variegated tobacco allowed is reduced from 30 to 20 per cent.

Mathews says that as he sees it, the application of the revised grades will result in certain qualities of tobacco being placed in lower grades unless growers adopt production practices that will reduce variegated and other undesirable tobacco to a minimum, do the best possible job of curing, and do a better job of sorting the tobacco on the farm than has been done the past few years.

The tobacco specialist says to have a comfortable, well-lighted room for sorting. If fluorescent lights are available from county agents.

In sorting on the farm, do not mix colors, do not mix thin and heavy leaf in the same piles, and keep all trash and very short leaf out of good grades.

Do not mix grades. If you do a hurried job of sorting under poor lights you will probably have mixed tobacco. Buyers can afford to pay more for uniformly graded unmixed tobacco than for mixed tobacco that requires rehandling.

Tie the tobacco in uniform bundles about the size of a half-dollar. Bundles that are too large cannot be properly redried. Excess moisture left in the heads of bundles packed in hogsheads causes spoilage in the hogshead.

The right moisture content is very important. Leaf should contain enough moisture to make it pliable, including most of the midrib. Great care must be taken, however, to avoid selling tobacco too high in "order." Such a practice often means moldy, sour, or damaged leaf.

Be very careful to see that string and other foreign matter are removed from the tobacco before it goes to market. It costs money for the industry to remove rocks, sticks, and other foreign matter from tobacco. These costs are ultimately reflected in prices paid to growers.

Butler is victor in dispute over convention tickets.

Vera

Vera, Sept. 1.- "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call on him in truth." — Psalms 145:18.

The summer is most gone. We have had a very hot summer. We were thankful for the nice rain and recent cooler weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Evert McLean, of Canada are spending this week in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Harvey.

Mr. Frank Gilliam and Miss Marguerete Gilliam visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Harvey on Wednesday.

Miss Nancy Scruggs is on the sick list. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Ossie Ferguson is visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Scruggs.

Mr. Lewis Turnes spent Saturday night in the home of Mr .and Mrs. T. C. Harvey.

Mrs. Lester B. Harvey visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Harvey on Thursday.

We are glad that Mrs. Wilson Scruggs has gotten home from the hospital.

The summer seems short. The children will be back in school this week.

TIDEWATER AREA SHOWS PRIDE IN HOME GROUNDS

Selling fertilizer and other garden supplies to suburbanites is no longer a "nuisance trade" for dealers in the City of Hampton and York County, according to Edwin G .Adams, county agent.

Whereas dealers once frowned on customers who bought fertilizer, seeds, and insectiicdes in small quantities, now they provide air-conditioned, well - appointed shops full of attractive displays and advertise for this kind of trade. They are saying, "We didn't realize so many home owners take a lot of pride in having well - landscaped grounds. They are willing to pay for quality materials, and keep us on our toes in stocking recommended products."

What are the recommended products — and practices? County Agent Adams finds that dealers and customers alike appreciate his service in supplying the latest information on adapted lawn-grass mixtures for Tidewater Virginia, suitable fertilizer grades, insecticides, and fungicides, and shrubs, trees, and flowers.

Some dealers get instructions and boxes for taking soil samples from Adams, distribute them to customers, and get the samples back to Adams who sends them to the VPI laboratory. Recommendations on use of fertilizer are based on these tests.

A landscape committee with representatives from each section or community meets each month to get information on ornamental horticultural problems provided by Extension agents, nurserymen and dealers. Adams' office puts out a monthly bulletin of timely information that is widely distributed — and the mailing list keeps growing.

And all this is supplemented by newspaper articles, meetings, personal visits, and telephone calls.

ALL-ELECTRIC LAUNDRY

HOME ADVISOR: It's joy enough that your All-Electric Laundry turns washday into wash hour. But what really limbers up your schedule is that wash hour can be any hour . . . day or night . . . rain or shine.

YOU: Doesn't the length of time depend on the kind of washing?

HOME ADVISOR: That's true. With light things, you can trim it under an hour. Bedspreads and beach towels need longer in the Electric Dryer. But whether wash hour turns out to be fifty minutes or eighty . . . you only have to be there for a few of those minutes. Just long enough to load and set the Automatic Electric Washer, and later to switch the damp wash to your Electric Dryer. You can even save that last with a combination Washer-Dryer.

YOU: Aren't you forgetting the ironing?

HOME ADVISOR: As a matter of fact, things come from the captive sunshine of your Electric Dryer so fluffy smooth you can fold half of them away without ironing. So plan yourself an All-Electric Laundry. A silent, safe, automatic Electric Water Heater for plenty of piping hot gallons at any hour. An Automatic Electric Washer. And an all-weather Electric Clothes Dryer. You need all three to set you free!

SHOWER GIVEN FOR MRS. FRED LAWSON

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 3, a Stork Shower was given to Mrs. Fred (Peggy) Lawson, by Mrs. Joyce Morris, Mrs. Grover Beasley, Jr. and Mrs. E. N. Fuller.

The party was held in Maude's Restaurant, and the hall was completely filled with friends and relatives of the honoree.

Contests were held, which brought forth mirth and laughter. Then, the opening of the many beautiful and useful gifts held the attention of everyone.

Delicious refreshments were served and best wishes were extended to the honoree.

ELLEN R. BLATTSPIELER TO WED H. T. TERRY, JR.

GIRL SCOUT ROUND-UP

The local Girl Scout trip to the Girl Scout Senior Round-up this summer was a wonderful experience. The group left Lynchburg on June 30 and arrived at Colorado Springs after an exciting two days on the train. From there the girls were taken directly to the Round-up site by bus, and there spent ten busy days. During the day, girls swapped our green store, chapstick and campsites of dirt from Surrender Grounds, watched demonstrations, and made friends with girls from all over the map. At night, they went star-gazing, to campfires, and attended special programs. On the Fourth of July, the new 49-star flag was raised by the girls from Alaska. On Colorado Centennial Day, there was a wonderful evening program with Koshari Indian dances, cowboy riding, etc., Each section of the camp went on a tour The Air Force Academy was visited, also the Gardens of the Gods, and there was a chuck-wagon dinner at the Flying W Ranch.

Lots of friends were made in the all-too-short Round-up, and girls of the Lynchburg Round-up Patrol are not likely to ever forget the experience.

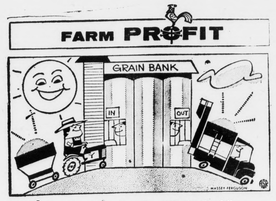
FARM PROFIT



Deposit Corn In The "Grain Bank"

Why are Farmers depositing their corn in a grain "bank?" For time savings, safety and convenience. It works similar to savings banks. The grain is deposited and held until they need feed. Then it is "withdrawn", mixed into a ration and delivered to the farm. The country elevator operator is the banker under this plan. He provides the "vault" to store the grain and makes his money from service fees which include storage, mixing and grinding.

The new miracle drugs that are added to feeds nowadays are largely responsible for this new banking idea. You only need a pinch or at most a couple of handfuls of antibiotics, hormones or vitamins in a ton of feed. Farmers can't blend these thoroughly themselves so they turn to the elevator with its big mixing equipment for help.

The usual deal is for a farmer to deposit enough corn in the bank to last a month or two. He gives the elevator a formula for each kind of feed he needs, telling how much corn, protein, vitamins, etc. he wants per ton.

When the feeders need filling he merely calls up the elevator and says, "Bring out a truck load of my hog mix." The elevator grinds and mixes a week's supply of feed to his formula, hauls it out to the farm in a big self-unloading truck, and puts it in the feeders. How's that for an easy way to get the chores done?

The usual charge for this service runs about 15c per bushel. Massey-Ferguson researchers find. This is about 8c per bushel more than it would cost to grind and mix on the farm. But it saves a lot of time and most farmers use this extra time to feed larger numbers of hogs or cattle.

Although storage is not the primary purpose of the grain bank, it is an added advantage for many farmers. It saves the cost of construction as well as maintenance of farm bins. There's no risk of spoilage or destruction of the grain, either.

ASC NEWS REPORT

With the sign-up period of the 1960 Conservation Reserve program under way, the Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee has outlined several major changes in the program for 1960. These changes include:

1. Cropland, the ownership of which has changed since December 31, 1956, is not eligible unless the change in ownership occurred because of inheritance as a result of the death of a previous owner.

2. A farm which has been operated by or with tenants during 1958 and 1959 will not be eligible for a contract unless tenants are designated on the contract to share in the annual payment.

3. A farm that was idle during both 1958 and 1959 is not eligible for a contract unless the farm was idle as a result of a Conservation Reserve contrast or an Acreage Reserve agreement.

4. The rate of annual payment under a 1960 Conservation Reserve contract cannot exceed the local fair rental value of the land as determined by the county committee on the basis of the record for the farm for the past five years.

In addition to tht above major changes in the Conservation Reserve Program for 1960, a change in the method of approving applications for contracts has been made. The principal change is that applications offering for which 1960 is the first year of the contract period cannot be accepted for contract unless the rate offered by the applicant is below the basic rate established for the land offered.

The program offers annual perarce payments for cropland put in the Conservation Reserve as well as cost-share payments for the establishment of conservation practices.

ASC Chairman W .D. Hix, III, said that the practices approved under the 1960 Conservation Reserve program include (1) the seeding of grasses and legumes, (2) planting forest trees, (3) establishment of wildlife cover, (4) establishment of shallow water areas for wildlife habitat and (5) the construction of fish ponds. Under the Conservation program the government will pay approximately 80 per cent of the cost of the tree planting practices and approximately 50 per cent of the cost of the other practices.

It is up to the individual farmer to decide the type and the amount of cropland which he wishes to place in the reserve, Mr. Hix explained. He urges farmers to come to the ASC office to learn how the program fits their farming operations. The chairman added that interested farmers should inquire at the county office before September 10 if they want an opportunity to take part in the 1960 program.

Sleepy Time

Detroit.- The operator heard heavy breathing, as if someone were in pain. She traced the call and alerted a fire department rescue squad.

"What in the world do you want?" asked an amazed Mrs. Arnell Thomas, as a dozen firemen pounded on her door.

A check showed Mrs. Thomas' 4-year-old son, Noah, Jr., was taking his nap in an upstairs bedroom, had knocked the phone off the hook and was snoring into it.

The Invisible Man

London.- A naked man walking along a street near the Houses of Parliament told a policeman who stopped him that he was invisible.

Unconvinced, the policeman hustled him off to a hospital.

False Alarm

Boston.- Police were summoned to the home of Mrs .Gussie Simmons because she heard "a loud noice and rattling of pans" in her kitchen.

Two policemen came to look for the prowler. They found two extremely hard-boiled eggs rattling around a waterless, red-hot pan. Mrs. Simmons then confessed that she put the eggs on to boil and then forgot them.
